Highlights

-November saw a significant unwind of momentum trades. Global equities were mixed, with the S&P 500 ultimately finishing the month in positive territory. U.S. Treasuries performed well as expectations for a December Fed rate cut were priced back in.

Market Review

November saw a volatile market, with risk assets selling off early before rebounding sharply at month-end. The Fed dominated sentiment, as expectations for a December rate cut swung widely. Al-bubble concerns also persisted. Global equity performance was mixed: Europe and the US ended slightly positive, though US Tech weakened on valuation worries, while EM and Japan declined amid Japan's large fiscal-stimulus announcement and rising JGB yields. US Treasuries rallied as a December cut was repriced, and K. Hassett emerged as a dovish Fed Chair candidate. Credit spreads widened slightly, gold rose, and the USD weakened broadly except against the yen.

Fund Review

The fund delivered a small positive return in November, driven mainly by its bond allocations, while equities were a slight detractor. U.S. equities contributed most to the negative equity result, with stock selection adding further drag, followed by emerging-market equities. Other regional equity exposures provided a neutral contribution. Bond positions were the main positive contributor, supported by credit exposure in an environment of declining interest rates and only marginal widening in credit spreads. Diversification strategies added additional value, bolstered by strong gains in gold. During the month, the manager increased credit exposure and continued to capitalise on opportunities in the primary credit market. The remaining government bonds were fully sold, completing the exit from this bucket.

Outlook

Looking to 2026, the Manager anticipates growth will become more widespread across sectors and while Europe will recover. The Fixed Income market presents an appealing setup, offering opportunities to benefit from yield carry without taking on excessive risks related to interest rate fluctuations or credit quality. Uncertainties on the inflation outlook and Fed's policy are balanced by downside risks to growth. Until there is greater clarity on inflation dynamics, economic growth trajectories, and fiscal policy direction, patience and selectivity remain key.
