Fund manager Comment

Highlights

- The Global high yield market spread to worst tightened by 12bps to 292bps in December. The market started 2025 with a spread to worst of 308bps. The US Federal Reserve cut interest rates for the third time in four months in December whilst the Bank of England also cut rates for the fourth time this year. This contrasts with the monetary backdrop in continental Europe where the rate-cutting cycle may be over after four cuts in the first half of the year.

| Cumulative performance | Fund | Index |
|---|---|---|
| 1M | 0.1% | 0.6% |
| YTD | 5.8% | 8.6% |

Market Review

The ICE BofA Global High Yield Index gained 0.66% in December, taking the full year return to 8.49%. BB-rated bonds returned 0.52% compared against a return of 0.87% for Bs and 0.80% for CCCs. Over the year CCC-rated bonds returned 4.57% whereas BBs and Bs fared significantly better with returns of 9.0% and 8.45% respectively. By geography, hedged to USD, the ICE BofA U.S. High Yield, Euro High Yield and Sterling High Yield Indices posted gains of 0.65%, 0.52% and 0.80% in December, respectively. For the full year 2025 those same indices, hedged to USD returned 8.50%, 7.34% and 8.74%, respectively. The top performing sectors in the Global High Yield Index in December were Leisure, Automotive and Basic Industry sectors. While in 2025 the top performing sectors were the Energy, Healthcare and Real Estate sectors.

Fund Review

The iMGP U.S. High Yield Fund converted to the iMGP Global High Yield Fund on the 17th December 2025. The Fund returned 0.2% in December, lagging the index by 41bps. For the full year 2025, the Fund returned 6.0% lagging its benchmark. In December, the largest detractors from relative performance were the Fund’s holdings across the B-rated spectrum. However, these negative effects were partially offset by the positive effects produced by the Fund’s holdings in the D-rated, Ba2-rated and Ba3-rated holdings which contributed to relative performance.m a sector perspective, during the month of December the Fund’s holdings in the Capital Goods, Other Financial and Technology sectors lagged those of the index and detracted from relative performance. However, these negative effects were partially offset by the positive effects produced by the Fund’s holdings in the Consumer Cyclical sector, which outperformed those of the index. From a trading perspective, most activity involved relative value trades and putting the inflow to work following the conversion.

Outlook

Though spreads remain relatively compressed we think '26 will be another positive year for the asset class. The ICE BofA GHY Index yield to worst of 6.5% represents a decent all-in yield and is likely a decent indicator of the ballpark return investors can expect over the coming twelve months. The macro backdrop is supportive with some of the triggers for volatility, such as tariffs, now behind us whilst drivers for growth such as defense spending and technological investment (which will support ancillary sectors such as infrastructure and energy) are accelerating. In our view the B-rated portion of the market, with a yield to worst of approximately 6.8%, represents the best opportunity set whilst BBs look slightly over-valued with a yield of 5.4%. We remain cautious about CCC-risk.
