Important information

As indicated in the "Fund facts" section, a new strategy has been implemented within the Fund pursuant to a change of Fund manager. As a result, where historical information on the Fund may be misleading, it is, in the Management Company's opinion, more relevant to provide the investors with information on the strategy. In such case, this will be appropriately specified in this marketing document. Unless otherwise specified, data contained in this document are provided as at 2026.01.31.

Investment objective

The objective of this Sub-fund is to provide its investors with a long-term appreciation of their capital, principally by means of a focused portfolio of investments in high quality common stocks of small and medium companies of issuers of the United States of America. At least two thirds of the Sub-fund's assets are invested at all times in equities and similar transferable securities issued by companies of medium or small stock market capitalization and having their registered office in the United States or operating predominantly in the United States. The MSCI US Small Cap Growth Net Return Index is used, in the appropriate currency of a given Share Class of the Sub-fund, for comparison only, including for performance comparison. The Fund is actively managed, and the Fund's manager's discretionary powers are not constrained by the index.

Market Review

SMID caps delivered one of their strongest performances to start a year ever as the confluence of rate cuts, improving sentiment, deregulation, strong economic growth, and positive earnings revisions drive relative outperformance vs large cap counterparts. After the past several years where leadership has been concentrated and narrow around the AI theme, it's encouraging to see a broadening out of sectors and industries driving performance headlined by Energy, Materials, and Industrials. From a style perspective, Beta and Value-Related factors outperformed amidst a cyclical rotation, while Growth modestly lagged.

Fund Review

Amidst this, net of fees, the Fund outperformed the benchmark primary driven by stronger stock selection in Industrials and, to a lesser extent, Energy and Health Care. This was partially offset by weakness in Tech and to a lesser degree Financials. Sector relative positioning was also a modest tailwind to relative performance, largely stemming from the overweight to Energy and Industrials. At the stock level, the top three contributors to relative performance included Bloom Energy, Cameco, and FTAI Aviation while bottom relative detractors included SoFi Technologies, Affirm Holdings, and First Solar. This strong performance to start the year was in large part driven by the continued strong performance of Bloom Energy—our largest position—up +74% in the month of January. The company is increasingly being seen as one of only a handful of options for data centers that want to turn on power quickly and reliably and not rely on the grid, which is strained and comes with PR headline risk. Other electrification and aerospace names in Industrials also benefitted performance. By contrast, late month concerns over how many rate cuts are likely this year weighed on Financials and most notably SoFi and Affirm Holdings.

Outlook

A core belief of ours is that change is the only constant. As such, we've designed a time-tested process around that core belief, seeking to understand change through the lens of 4 primary forces—1) competitive advantage, 2) strategy/management shifts 3) thematic forces and 4) cyclical business conditions—that impact earnings growth, which we believe is the ultimate driver of stock price performance. This process has served us well for more than 25 years and will continue to guide us in the future irrespective of the prevailing headlines of the day.
