Important information

As indicated in the "Fund facts" section, a preexisting strategy with a proven track record has been implemented within this Fund since its inception. Where historical information on the Fund cannot be provided, it is, in the Management Company's opinion, relevant to provide the investors with information on the strategy. In such case, this will be appropriately specified in this marketing document. Unless otherwise specified, data contained in this document are provided as at 2026.01.31.

Investment objective

The objective of this Sub-fund is to provide its investors with long-term capital appreciation by implementing a UCITS compliant strategy that seeks to approximate the returns that alternative funds using "Managed Futures style" would typically achieve, which comprises strategies that aim at generating returns by taking long and short positions across asset classes (equities indices, government bonds or rates, currencies and/or commodities via eligible instruments) and by using futures and forward contracts to achieve their investment objectives. There is generally low to no exposure to single companies. These alternative funds generally use quantitative processes to identify long or short opportunities in the various asset classes they analyse. Despite being directional by nature, these strategies have a low correlation to major risk factors over the medium to long term. For the avoidance of doubt, the Sub-Manager will not invest in such alternative funds. The Fund is actively managed not in reference to a benchmark.

Market Review

Precious metals were the focus of investors over the course of the month and if you only looked at monthly marks, you would have, for better or worse, missed the chaos. Gold and silver rallied over 24% and 64%, respectively, into the last day of the month. However, with the nomination of the new Federal Reserve governor, Kevin Warsh, the run-away train was abruptly halted at month end as silver dropped an eye watering -31% in one day while gold followed, falling -11%. The rotation away from US dollar exposure continued as the trade weighted index fell and equity flows shifted into international markets, both developed and emerging.

Fund Review

The continued rally in gold into the new year contributed positively to portfolio performance, and maximum exposure was maintained. As the month progressed, the portfolio shifted meaningfully toward emerging markets and EAFE equities while reducing exposure to U.S. markets. By month end, positioning reflected a relative value stance, with a short in the U.S. offset by a high conviction long in international equities. The portfolio remained positioned in the short Japanese yen trade, which has been beneficial in recent months but detracted in January as the currency rallied amid rumors of U.S. Treasury support. Performance coming from the Euro was neutral and positioning was reduced during the month. In fixed income, the portfolio increased net duration exposure along the yield curve, however, rising rates led to modest losses.

Outlook

The start of the year has been volatile but investors seem to be risk seeking given positive economic developments over the globe. Political uncertainty will require investors to stay agile. CTAs are enjoying a goldilocks environment with multiple trends working in their favor and are continuing to add diversification benefits to traditional stock and bond portfolios.
