Fund manager Comment

Highlights

- TOPIX NTR fell -10.5%, reverting February gain
- Negative impact from spike of energy prices with potential supply chain disruption
- End of excessive valuation but elevated level of uncertainty

Cumulative performance	Fund	Index
1M	-10.6%	-10.4%
YTD	-1.1%	3.7%

Market Review

Amid the war in Middle East, the TOPIX NTR tumbled -10.5% worse than the -5% decline in global equities. The market sell-off was broad, without much performance gap by market cap or style. The low volatility factor performed better while momentum did worse. The JPY lost -2% vs the USD but posted a small gain vs EUR. The sovereign yield curve steepened with the 10-year benchmark close to 2.4%, its highest level in over 25 years. All sectors except Energy, +6%, posted negative returns. Real Estate and Information Technology drop by -15% each, giving back a large portion of their January-February gains of 23% and 16% respectively. Defensive sectors (Communication Services, Utilities, Health Care, Consumer Staples) were relatively resilient, losing between -3% and -6% each. The Bank of Japan's board members kept their stance on reaching neutral rate.

Fund Review

The fund lost c.-10.5% in line with the market. The allocation detracted c.-0.5 point mostly due to an overweight in Real Estate and a lack of exposure to the Energy sector. The stock selection was generally positive, especially within Industrials. The main contributor Mitsui & Co, +c.30bps/+2%, benefited from its resource exposure, while the main detractor was Fuji Electric, -c.30bps/-24%, it had gained 27% in February. The absence of Tokio Marine, +13%, and Mitsubishi Corp, +1%, detracted a combined c-50bps, while not owning the AI heavy semiconductor tester giant Advantest, -24%, contributed +c20bps. Nintendo re-entered the portfolio with a 2% weight, a 1pt overweight. Its share price has lost over a third of its value since last autumn on memory price and software lineup headwinds. With the negatives factored in, we expect news flow on content pipeline and potential price revisions to improve going forward. LY Corp's exposure was doubled to 3% on attractive valuations, fund's largest overweight positioning. Taking advantage of share price weakness Hitachi was topped up by 2pts to 3%, a slight overweight. Toyota Motor was reduced by -1.5pts to 5%, a 2pts overweight, as it is likely to see an impact from the current macro situation. Small positions in Bridgestone, Denso, and Kansai Paint were exited for similar reasons. The fund remains exposed to the Real Estate sector with a 6% weight, a 4pts active bet. The Consumer Discretionary overweight was trimmed to a slight 1pt at 16%, while Communication Services exposure was raised to neutral on Nintendo and LY Corp trades. The main underweight exposures between -3 to -4pts are to Industrials (25% weight), Financials (14%), Health Care (3%) and Materials (2%). The fund is fully invested including TOPIX futures. The ESG profile is broadly unchanged. The Fund trades at 15.1x FY26 P/E, 1.75x P/B and 2.1% dividend yield. TOPIX valuations are at 14.9x, 1.58x and 2.1% respectively.

Outlook

The war in the Middle East is casting doubt over the expected double-digit EPS growth for the 2026 fiscal year. With the destruction of energy infrastructure in the Middle East, even an end of the conflict is unlikely to bring energy prices down to pre-war levels. On the monetary front, market participants are still expecting a rate hike before summer, followed by another toward the end of the year. Headline inflation will accelerate due to the spike in energy prices supporting the BoJ's rate hike narrative. However, the negative impact on economic growth is yet to be seen, raising stagflation risk. The fund focuses on domestic companies and reasonably priced free cash flow generators even if the team is challenged to find attractive stock picking due to elevated valuation.
